

More about personnel strategy - employment openings

M-Reel AS has had periods with a permanent staff in Norway as well as in Houston and in Korea. When the activity level is high this function very well in both an economical as well as technical sense.

During slow periods however this leads to a necessity for staff reduction to cut cost, and re-hiring of personnel when the market picks up again.

Current strategy is therefore to have a slim permanent staff and then hire - on a daily basis - the staff needed to assemble and dismantle the M-Reels worldwide.

The mechanics and engineers use by the company will - between the M-Reel engagements - work for their regular employer and have an agreement with him which enables them to take on shorter engagements assembling or dismantling the M-reels or performing design work for the company.

M-Reel AS also engaged personnel via established companies who hire out personnel, but a prerequisite is, as it also is for direct hire, that the same personnel is offered to our company for each project.

We train the personnel both through our review of all work procedures before each engagement as well as by having new personnel work under the supervision of one experienced Supervisor.
